Key findings

Relevance

- IFAD’s overall objectives and the design of the strategy were valid.
- Some assumptions (e.g., cost neutrality) were not fully valid.
- By 2013 IFAD could have made a more structured functional analysis of what is done best in headquarters and at the country level.

Effectiveness

<tr>
<th>ICOs helped to:</th>
<th></th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Strengthen Country Strategic Opportunities Programmes and project design.</td>
<td>Improve results at the country level through more successful projects.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Deliver better results in addressing rural poverty and gender, innovation and scaling up and sustainability.</td>
<td>Facilitate supervision and strengthen project implementation support.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Contributions to improving non-lending activities were mixed.</td>
<td></td>

Efficiency

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>ICOs have not led to Programme Management Department and IFAD budget escalation.</th>
<th>There has been no functional analysis and reorganization of the headquarters divisions.</th>
<th>There are issues of limited delegation of authority to senior Country Programme Managers.</th>

<tr>
<td>Programme Management Department staffing levels at headquarters have not been reduced as decentralization has proceeded.</td>
<td>There is insufficient differentiation of expectations between varying ICO types and prioritization of functions for individual countries.</td>

Recommendations

1. Strengthen IFAD’s country presence while pursuing options for enhancing cost efficiency.
2. Provide more support to non-lending activities to achieve stronger development results.
3. Improve decentralized decision-making through stronger delegation of authority.
4. Enhance staff incentives and capacity to operate in a decentralized environment.
5. Improve the quality of data, monitoring and self-assessment.
