UN BEHAVIOURAL SCIENCE WEEK

USING EVIDENCE FROM BEHAVIOURAL SCIENCE FOR CLIMATE ACTION

JUNE 12, 2023

17:00 CEST

ZOOM MEETINGS

Behavioural science offers the promise of positive environmental and development outcomes. Yet evidence on which behavioural science tools work best for climate action is lacking.

The International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD) and the Green Climate Fund - Independent Evaluation Unit (GCF-IEU) completed an evidence gap map with 84 studies to provide an overview of the evidence landscape. 60 studies were included in a systematic review covering 5 intervention types. This provides evidence that reminders and feedback are an effective behavioural approach to improving intermediate and final outcomes, respectively.

This session summarises findings and includes a panel presentation and debate with speakers from IFAD, GCF-IEU, Food and Agricultural Organisation (FAO), Busara Center for Behavioral Economics, ideas42 and Rare.
